Amid Violent Crime Spike Police Saturation Nets Guns

by Stephanie Quinn

Assaults Lead Violent Crime Increase in Franklin Park Over Past Decade

The number of aggravated assaults that the Greenbelt Police Department has confirmed in Franklin Park has almost tripled since 2013, from 18 to 52.

The Greenbelt Police Department seized seven illegal firearms during its December crime suppression operation in Franklin Park, an area of Greenbelt where the annual number of aggravated assaults confirmed by police has almost tripled over the past decade.

The 52 aggravated assaults that the department reported to the FBI for the area over the course of 2022 nearly triple the 2013 total of 18, according to monthly crime reports.

The 2022 total comes amid the department's reports of a January 24 shooting, the February 10 arrest of a murder suspect, a February 3 combined arson and Greenbelt Porch Coordinators Lien, left, and Maya Gareri along with Robert Goldberg-Strassler accept the Random Acts of Kindness Day Proclamation from Mayor Emmett Jordan.

This year the City of Greenbelt is celebrating Friday, February 17 as a day of Random Acts of Kindness. At Monday's city council meeting Mayor Emmett Jordan presented a proclamation recognizing the day to Robert Goldberg-Strassler and Lien and Maya Gareri of the Random Unselfish Acts of Kindness (RUAK) group. The proclamation stated that, "the City of Greenbelt recognizes simple acts of kindness performed without prompting or reason and how these acts can positively impact the performer, the recipient and the onlooker of the good deed."

At the meeting Goldberg-Strassler highlighted three of RUAK's projects: Greenbelt Porch, Greenbelt Plogs and Pre-K Storytime at Franklin Park.

Exhibit Celebrates Greenbelt Lake with Beautiful Photos

by Erica Johns

The photography exhibit on display this month at the Patuxent Wildlife Visitor Center tells many stories about Greenbelt Lake, its wildlife, those who love and care for the lake's treasures, and the photographers who capture their beauty. The stories include topics such as animal life and their behaviors, the excitement of seeing it and the joy of sharing it with others, management practices to preserve a healthy lake and the importance of creating new advocates to care for the lake into the future.

The community of photographers teach each other to recognize specific animals and their behavior patterns, and help each other develop their skills to photograph them.

The Photographers

The exhibit contains the work of 22 photographers – professionals and hobbyists with experience ranging from a single year to decades. Seventy percent have never exhibited before. They include an elementary school teacher, mentioned the bird life to her son, photographer Bruce Smith, he bought her a camera. Brown met Graeme Simpson, a professional nature photographer originally from New Zealand, at Lake Artemesia and told him about

by Chris Cherry and Rebecca Squire

After a pandemic hiatus, Greenbelt Recreation is celebrating the return of the annual Youth Musical by presenting a sparkling show about the resurgence of joy.

Tickets go on sale today for The Joy Gods Return, written and directed by Greenbelt resident Chris Cherry and featuring a cast of talented teen actors from several local schools.

Set in Manhattan a year after 9/11, the story concerns actress Felicity Knox, who makes a surprise appearance as Iris, the messenger goddess of joy, on the Channel Four morning news.

Her stunt is meant to publicize the premiere of her late husband's musical, The Joy Gods Return, but it blossoms into a campaign of joy that lifts the spirits of the entire city. New York falls in love with Iris, and so does jaded newscaster Brian Banning, whose quest for an exposé nearly wrecks everything.

Alternately funny and touching by turns, the show is an uplifting and entertaining depiction of finding love after experiencing loss. Zoe Larsen, a senior at Eleanor Roosevelt High School, plays Felicity. Creedence Jackson, a student at Bowie State University and an alumnus of the youth musical program, plays Brian. The play-within-a-play structure of the story affords the other cast members the opportunity to play multiple roles.

There will be four performances in the Community Center Gymnasium/Auditorium: Saturday, March 4 at 7 p.m.; Sunday, March 5 at 3 p.m.; and Saturday, March 11 at 2 and 7 p.m.

To purchase tickets, visit the Community Center Business Office, or call 301-397-2208. Historically, the Youth Musical has sold out, so advance purchase is recommended.

Letters to the Editor

Don't Miss Greenbelt Photographers' Exhibit

The Greenbelt Lake Wildlife Photographers' Exhibit at the Patuxent Research Refuge is stellar. For all of February, the National Wildlife Visitor Center is hosting The Greenbelt Lake Photographers' Exhibit at the John Hollingsworth Gallery. The photographs in the exhibition, in vibrant color and large scale, are landscapes and animal portraits from Greenbelt Lake, Buddy Attick Park. I suggest that you drive over immediately and gaze at these masterpieces.

I rolled up to the opening reception on Saturday morning expecting snapshots, coffee and donuts. Instead, I was greeted with a dry famine, yet a most excellent potent visual experience of the masterful photo show. Folks were called to the auditorium for a presentation by Kevin Carpenter-Driscoll, Greenbelt's environmental coordinator, who delivered some vivid animal photographs during his conservation slide show. The lively hour-long discussion did not prove a bore, it was more like Greenbelt and Laurel's version of a raucous Studio 54.

Also on display at the visitor center is the traveling exhibit, Federal Junior Duck Stamp Conservation and Design Program, featuring duck paintings and drawings by teenagers and younger. You will be in awe. These young people paint ducks accurately and with the added flair of animal personality, with background landscapes.

And it's a real nice place to take a walk. Or watch birds.

Greenbelt Ploggers

Greenbelt Plogs is a group of ploggers – folks who pick up trash as they walk – committed to cleaning up the streets. There are now at least 25 ploggers in Greenbelt, said Goldberg-Strassler. Thanks to a partnership with Public Works, the Ploggers have been provided with gloves, reflective vests and pick-up sticks. They also coordinate with Public Works to communicate which areas have been cleared to avoid redundancy.

Pre-K Storytime

Finally, Goldberg-Strassler shared that one of the newer initiatives of RUAK is a Pre-K storytime at Franklin Park, begun last October, which he hopes will encourage literacy and help prepare children for school. RUAK had previously worked with Greenbelt Elementary School and Greenbelt Middle School but "I figured I'm missing the age 0 to 5 population," said Goldberg-Strassler, who wants to "encourage the young to love literacy a little bit sooner and prep them for elementary school." Last week Friday's storytime session had 23 children in attendance, he reported.

Friday, February 17

Jordan said Friday is a day for random unselfish acts of kindness. "I don't really know what we'll see," he said, "but hopefully we'll see Greenbelters and folks from all over doing all sorts of wonderful things," he said. If someone is interested in Porch or Plogging or other RUAK programs, contact spreadruak@gmail.com.

"It's powerful," said Jordan as he thanked Goldberg-Strassler. "It's an example of if one person, three people, 10 people all just take a little time and do one thing it can make a huge difference," said Jordan.

Legislative Priorities

Council Seeks Answers to Tax Issues, Metro Station Updates

by Susan Taylor

Greenbelt City Council meets annually with local legislators and government representatives before the Maryland General Assembly’s 90-day legislative session to present the priorities of Greenbelt and to strategize. Officials met in person on December 20 and councilmembers relayed the city’s hopes for a statewide single-use plastic ban as well as opposition to plans for a maglev train, widening the Beltway and the construction of a Bureau of Engraving and Printing facility in the Beltsville Agricultural Research Center. (For more information about priorities, see the January 26 issue of the News Review.)

Requesting Clarity

Two priorities speak to a lack of timely transparency on the part of the State of Maryland for the residents of Greenbelt.

For a city or town to budget effectively, they need to know how much money is coming in before committing to money going out. Council has asked its representatives to press for timely and clear information from the state regarding the granting of tax abatement requests. These abatement changes would reduce or exempt a taxpayer from paying the amount charged in tax or penalties. The Maryland Homestead Tax Credit, for example, reduces the property tax charged for a primary residence.

Council also asked for a rewording of the language in Constant Yield Tax Rate notices “to be more understandable” (see the January 5, 2023, News Review issue for an explanation of the Constant Yield Tax Rate). The current language, they said, is “very confusing to residents,” when the rate of tax changes to keep the amount of money coming in (the yield) the same.

Metro Improvements

Greenbelt Metro Station acts as a link to multiple transportation modalities for residents and visitors and, according to council, has the “potential to act as a catalyst for significant economic development.” Proximity to I-495, I-95, the Baltimore-Washington Parkway and Greenbelt Road make Greenbelt Metro station a first choice for area visitors. Regardless of the possible decision on relocating the FBI headquarters to that location, the station is a transportation hub connecting foot, bike, bus, auto, subway and MARC train modes of movement.

The station was built in the early 1990s with an interchange connecting it to the Beltway in only one direction – west. Since then, the Washington Metropolitan Area Transit Authority (WMATA) and the Greenbelt City Council have traded positions on the benefits, ecological detriments and feasibility of building a full interchange, allowing access from and return to both the inner and outer loops of the Beltway.

Twenty years ago, former County Councilmember Thomas Hendershot declared, “It is insulting that people from Montgomery County and Howard County have a better Beltway access to the Greenbelt station than the vast majority of Prince Georgians.” The interchange project has been in the State Consolidated Program (the plan for use of community development funds) for over 20 years. It is considered crucial to the FBI relocation and other future developments at the Greenbelt Metro Station.

Delegate Anne Healey stated that money was available in the Fiscal Year 2022 budget for both the Beltway interchange and a direct connection from Greenbelt Road through the Greenbelt Station neighborhood (see the February 10, 2022, News Review). Road access from Greenbelt Road would ease some of the difficulty for residents of Greenbelt Station in reaching the Metro station.

Currently in the permitting phase and in need of more funding is the pedestrian and bike trail that will provide access not only to residents of Greenbelt Station, but to those of Berwyn Heights, Branchville and other nearby neighborhoods.

Station Upgrades

The station opened in 1993 and needs an upgrade. Some improvements were planned for summer 2020 and have yet to be implemented. Upgrades, such as real-time bus arrival signage and Capital Bikeshare docks are modernizing and local riders are eager for these improvements, making commuting easier.

Other improvements will not only serve current Metro riders but have the possibility of attracting businesses and other development. Restroom facilities, landscaping and improvements to the aging façade fall into this category.

The Bell Affair Brought Local History to the Screen

by Deanna Dawson

A large crowd attended the screening of The Bell Affair at Old Greenbelt Theatre (OGT) last Thursday; the event was presented in partnership with the Prince George’s County Historical Society. The film chronicles the true story of the Bell family, who were enslaved in Prince George’s County but sent to work in Washington, D.C. Amid a city-wide race riot that erupted from a strike at the Washington Navy Yard in 1835, Daniel Bell convinced a dying Robert Armstead, his wife Mary’s slaveholder, to free Mary and their children.

After Armstead’s death, however, his wife Susan refused to honor the manumission deed and arranged to have the Bells sold. Daniel fought a desperate battle in court to win his own freedom and protect his family from Susan Armstead. When Mary and the children’s freedom suits failed, the Bells attempted to escape enslavement, setting off down the Potomac River in 1848 on the schooner Pearl with about 70 other slaves seeking freedom.

As it approached the Chesapeake Bay, the Pearl was intercepted by an armed steamer dispatched by slaveholders and returned to Washington. Members of the Bell family continued to sue for their freedom, some successfully, but most remained enslaved until the District of Columbia Compensated Emancipation Act became law in April of 1862.

Following the film there was a Q&A session with the film’s executive producers, Dr. Kwakiutl Dreher and Dr. William G. Thomas III of the University of Nebraska. The film is based on one of the stories in historian Thomas’s book A Question of Freedom: The Families Who Challenged Slavery from the Nation’s Founding to the Civil War (Yale University Press, 2020; available for checkout through the Prince George’s County Memorial Library System). Dreher and Thomas responded to numerous questions from the crowd about the history, including the role of Francis Scott Key, known primarily for his lyrics for The Star-Spangled Banner, who was depicted in the film prosecuting, as the U.S. Attorney for the District of Columbia, an abolitionist for libelous sedition and intent to incite a slave revolt. Thomas said that Key, a slaveholder, sometimes represented slaves seeking freedom and sometimes represented slaveholders, and Key supported the colonization movement to send freed slaves to Africa. Thomas said that the ill-fated escape on the Pearl, which was one of the largest slave escape attempts in the U.S., had been arranged by Daniel Bell and others, and the Bell family was the largest group aboard, along with other enslaved families including the Queen family, several of whose descendants were in the OGT audience.

There were also questions about how the film was made, which Dreher was directly involved in. The original plan to film in person was changed by the Covid pandemic to being both directed and filmed remotely. Each of the 40 cast members recorded their speaking parts in their homes, with Dreher providing detailed instructions to each on the tone and gestures to use in each scene. The film editors brought all the parts together and then finished it with rotoscope animation, which basically drapes an animation layer over the live footage to smooth it, include background images and make the action more realistic. Thomas noted that this approach seemed appropriate when the events are known but not all their details, requiring both filmmakers and viewers to use “historical imagination” to get into the history and empathize with those who experienced it. For more information on the historical background and the making of the film, go to animatinghistory.com/bellaffair.

New County Councilmember Meets Greenbelt Constituents

by Lois Rosado

County Councilmember Ingrid Watson (formerly Harrison) met with Greenbelt constituents on Wednesday, February 8, at the Community Center. The purpose was to learn about local concerns through interactive dialogue. Watson vowed to be a strong partner to Mayor Emmett Jordan, the Greenbelt City Council and Greenbelt residents. She introduced members of her staff and informed the audience that a newsletter to constituents will be sent out from her office to provide an overview of what is happening in the district and at the county council.

Watson also brought with her representatives from the county's Office of Community Relations and the Office of Employment who distributed informational materials.

Greenbelt Schools

Watson wants to ensure that Greenbelt schools, Springhill Lake Elementary in particular, remain a priority on the next phase of the P3 Blueprint Schools implementation plan, an alternative financing model to build new public schools in the county.

The Environment

An advocate for environmentally friendly policies like eliminating Prince George's County's dependence on single-use plastics, Watson supports the county's Climate Action Plan. She plans to work with the Greenbelt City Council and SAVE BARC in order to mitigate the negative impacts of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing facility at the Beltsville Agricultural Research Center.

Transportation

Working with state partners on the maintenance of roads and sidewalks, Watson supports the proposed Greenbelt East Trail Project that would help with access to an even more walkable and bikeable community.

Projects, Needs Supported

Watson listed a full range of projects and community needs she plans to support:

- Policies for equitable economic development that include

County Councilmember Ingrid Watson talks with constituent Jenni Pompi.

transit-oriented development, specifically around Greenbelt Metro station and other stations in District 4.

- Roundtables to bring together HOAs, community and civic association leaders to share their concerns and provide much needed resources.

- Host an environmental conference each spring to bring together county agencies and non-profit environmental organizations to educate the community about climate change and how individuals can take action to combat climate change and reduce greenhouse gases.

- Work with police chiefs and the State's Attorney office to promote safer communities as crime levels continue to increase.

- Support for seniors, veterans, residents with disabilities and families needing assistance with rent, job training or finding employment, and specifically working with businesses to hire Prince Georgians.

- Work with small and minority-owned businesses to move more efficiently through the county's permit process.

Watson shared an overview of county council activities that she is a part of. There is an effort to eliminate the ability of new development projects to use certain site-specific text amendments thereby ensuring that developers follow the new zoning ordinances and allowing for grandfathering of some projects already in process including CB-083-2021. Apartment housing for seniors in Greenbelt is moving forward with Watson voting for this bill.

Watson voted to amend the zoning ordinance that prohibits the development of townhouses and one-family attached dwelling units in the Residential Agricultural (R-A) Zone.

She is considering bills that address rent stabilization, a pilot project labor agreement, a security camera incentive program, an amendment of the hours of operation for tobacco and e-cigarette stores, prohibiting storage facilities in specific areas, amending procedures for public notice and review and an amendment to make the zoning ordinance process more transparent.

Watson stated that she is opposed to the maglev train being built anywhere in Maryland and will continue to support that effort. She encouraged those present and beyond to reach out to her office so that she can address their concerns, by emailing her at councildistrict4@co.pg.md.us, or visiting her webpage at pgccouncil.us/254/District-4.

shooting in the complex and a February 13 shooting that resulted in a lockdown at the neighborhood elementary school.

Police spokesperson Hannah Glasgow said officers’ 168 premise checks and 155 traffic stops during the 28-day saturation patrol, which lasted from December 3 through December 31, enabled them to confiscate a large number of firearms compared to most months. According to the department’s weekly crime data, in December 2021, police confiscated three firearms and in December 2020, they confiscated one.

Glasgow said the crime suppression operation allotted two to four additional officers to Franklin Park per shift to conduct proactive patrols and respond to calls for service. The department typically assigns one officer to each of Greenbelt’s three area commands.

“During regular patrol, officers just by the nature of the job have to be really reactive and might be able to do one or two traffic stops a night,” Glasgow said. “When you’re doing these saturation patrols, you can do up to 10 in ... a four-hour shift.”

Police seized four of the seven illegal firearms after pulling over vehicles with illegally tinted windows.

Officer Albert Murray, the department’s community officer for Franklin Park, said the crime suppression effort supported his goal of doing more proactive and community-oriented policing.

“My objective is to just definitely build back trust with the community and tackle some of the problems that the community has going on,” Murray said, “whether that’s being very visible and vigilant at nighttime ... or something as simple as walking through and saying hi to the kids out there.”

Glasgow said the possibility of future saturation patrols depends on budgetary constraints. Officers participated in the effort on top of their usual patrols. “This was done on officers’ overtime,” she said.

Some Franklin Park residents recognized officers’ efforts but described continuing safety concerns. Myisha Hagler, 40, a patient services representative who moved to Franklin Park in 2018, feels better about her son’s safety than a year ago. Hagler recalled being stranded outside her apartment last January after a murder led police to seal off the adjoining building. Her building is only accessible through the adjoining building.

“I was terrified to let my son go outside and play, because anything can happen,” Hagler said.

Hagler suggested that Franklin Park management could protect residents by installing key access to buildings. “I’ve seen people sleeping in buildings,” she said. “You know, [they’re] sitting in the hall, and they’re drinking, and I don’t even know if they’re residents here or not.”

Rachel Antzak, 40, a data analyst who has lived in Franklin Park since 2013, said some parts of the complex are poorly lit at night and secluded from the road. “It’s like, ‘Okay, well I’m not going past this point, because it’s too dark and I don’t feel comfortable going down that way,’” she said.

Franklin Park management

did not respond to requests for comment.

Murray emphasized the department’s commitment to the Franklin Park community.

“The department definitely cares about the city,” Murray said. “One hundred percent. And if there’s a problem ... we try our hardest to not just put a BandAid on it. We try to get to the root of the issue and solve it.”

Greenbelt Police Arrest Local Man for Two Attempted Murders

by Anna Bedford-Dillow

After an extensive investigation by the Criminal Investigations Unit, the Greenbelt Police Department has arrested 24-year-old Armani Williams of Greenbelt for two recent shootings in the city. A warrant for his arrest was issued on February 1, and on February 8, at approximately 8 p.m., Prince George’s County Police executed a search warrant in the 9000 block of Breezewood Terrace in Franklin Park, with Greenbelt Police officers assisting. Williams was taken into custody and transported to the Greenbelt Police Station for processing.

Williams is charged with attempted first-degree murder for the August 10, 2022, shooting at the Shell gas station on Cherrywood Lane, near Beltway Plaza, which landed a man in hospital, suffering from gunshot wounds. After being shot at the gas station, the victim drove away while the shooter continued to fire at his moving car, endangering multiple bystanders. Police were notified a little after 9 p.m. that evening by the hospital that was treating the man. The victim survived his injuries. In addition to attempted first-degree murder for this shooting, Williams is charged with first-degree assault, reckless endangerment, firearm use in a felony violent crime and handgun on person.

Williams is also charged with the shooting of a 25-year-old man just one block away from the first shooting, on Cherrywood Lane. The second shooting took place on January 24, at approximately 6:17 p.m. When police responded to the report of a shooting, they found the 25-year-old suffering from multiple gunshot wounds. This victim also survived his injuries. For this incident, Williams is charged with attempted first-degree murder, first-degree assault, second-degree assault and firearm use in a felony violent crime.

Williams has several arrests and charges in his past, including for misdemeanor theft and disorderly conduct at the age of 18, in 2016; second-degree assault, disorderly conduct, fraud and resisting arrest in 2018; felony robbery, second-degree assault, drug charges and false statements to an officer in 2019; second-degree assault, felony robbery and misdemeanor theft in 2020; as well as multiple cases with the Department of Social Services to establish paternity and child support for three children.

Williams is currently being held without bond.

This report was made using multiple police reports and public case records.

School Locked Down Due to Nearby Shooting

Springhill Lake Elementary School was placed on a brief lockdown Tuesday following a shooting in the neighborhood.

At approximately 12:44 p.m. on February 13, Greenbelt Police officers responded to the 6200 block of Springhill Drive for the report of a shooting with injuries. Greenbelt Teen Still Missing

Kinney Cohen

Fifteen-year-old Kinney Elle Cohen has not been seen since approximately 9 p.m. on Saturday, February 4. She was last seen in the 7300 block of Morrison Drive, which is on the eastbound side of Greenbelt Road between Frankfort Drive and Mandan Road. The teen was last seen wearing a tan sweater, black leggings and purple Crocs.

Cohen is described as a Black female approximately 4 feet 10 inches in height and 120 lbs. The critical factor is age. The Greenbelt Police Department requests that those with information regarding her whereabouts call 301-474-7200.

Police Launch #9PM Routine

The Greenbelt Police Department is launching its #9PM routine. The #9PM routine is a nightly reminder to residents to remove valuables from their vehicles, lock their vehicle doors, lock the doors to their residences, turn on exterior lights and activate alarms and security systems.

Every night the department will send out a reminder.

Criminals look for easy targets. Make it more difficult for them by following the #9PM routine. Many vehicle burglaries, and to a lesser degree, stolen vehicles, occur as a result of vehicles being left unlocked. Criminals walk through neighborhoods, trying vehicle door handles, hoping to find one unlocked. The best way to prevent vehicle burglaries is to remove all valuables, lock the vehicle's doors upon exiting and take the keys to the vehicle inside one's residence.

Greenbelt Police encourage those who own a Hyundai, Kia or Honda car model to take the #9PM routine a step further by adding a steering wheel club lock as an extra deterrent.

classes to relearn the language. Bob created a diorama of the Battle of Trackie which is on display in the Balzekas Museum of Lithuanian Culture in Chicago, Ill. A favorite pastime of Bob's was brewing Veritas, a traditional Lithuanian liquor, in his kitchen. Paula would take their sons outside in case Bob – not the best cook – blew up the kitchen.

After retirement Bob could be found walking and fishing around Greenbelt Lake. He and Paula were members of the Greenbelt Aquatic & Fitness Center where Bob could be found on the treadmill or stationary bike, always with a book in hand. His workout complete, Bob would wander around the Roosevelt Center visiting the Co-op Grocery Store and Generous Joe's while waiting for Paula to finish swimming. Bob and Paula also started a monthly wine club comprised of 14 people who had raised their children together. The wine club held over 105 gatherings, stopping only when Covid hit.

Bob is survived by Paula, his wife of 56 years; sons Scott (Cindy) and Shawn (Valerie); and grandchildren Troy, Kate, Kyle and Colin. In accordance with Bob's wishes, his body was donated to the Maryland Anatomy Board and no service was held.

To remember Bob, the family suggests enjoying some of Bob's favorite foods – pepperoni pizza, marshmallow peeps or Boston cream donuts. Donations in Bob's memory can be made to a local hospice or the Brandy Station Foundation at brandystationfoundation.com.

Greenbelt Lake. He then told Ken Briefel about the lake.

The photographers live from Fort Washington to Greenbelt to Gaithersburg, visiting the lake as often as every day. Many are in contact daily, at the lake or online, pointing out the day’s wildlife, identifying species, reacting to each other’s work and sharing skills including camera settings and composition. One retiree said, “It keeps me mentally strong, involved with people, in touch with the outside world and up to date.”

Some capture many plants and animals; others focus on particular subjects. Kevin Higgins prefers reptiles: “I don’t know much about them, so that’s why I enjoy photographing them.” For Michael Garcia, it’s raptors. Marc Siegel is known for smartphone closeups from his kayak, and Raven Eyes Cagle her landscapes; Mick Morgan loves amphibians, Amy Wenzel birds and the great blue heron is Kathryn Beard’s favorite.

They use smartphones, simple point-and-shoot cameras or complex cameras and lenses. Mike Kilberg’s work demonstrates that successful wildlife photography doesn’t require long experience and expensive cameras. He began in spring 2022 with a point-and-shoot camera, just in time to capture the barred owls nesting at the Lake that year. David Crissinger learned from Simpson that it’s more about patience than gear, as when waiting for a creature to turn its head. Tom Statas said of his osprey flying with a fish, “It takes hours and hours to get a fish.”

Animal Behavior

Beard said orioles are “... very cool to see. The first week in May they start coming. When they first get here, they’re so excited, flying around, then they pick a tree [pointing to a hanging nest still visible in January]. It’s just fascinating seeing new things.” Kilberg said herons are “... wonderful subjects, it’s really fun to watch them fish.” Wade Stephen said that late winter brings a variety of waterfowl as they migrate through Maryland.

Ken Nguyen shot from the ground with a very long lens for his close-up of a parent sheltering owlets from the cold. Simpson said owls deliberately nest near paths and people for protection from natural predators like red-shouldered hawks, which don’t like to approach people and were also nesting at the lake (see Gloria Brown’s baby hawks).

Our Wildlife Neighbors

The exhibit opened with a high energy reception on Saturday, February 4, with about 200 attendees thronging the photos and hearing city environmental coordinator Kevin Carpenter-Driscoll tell how Greenbelt incorporates habitat protection in managing city green spaces. The man-made lake has become a natural ecosystem which the city supports with a mostly hands-off approach. Public Works (PW) leaves many dead trees, which owls need for nesting and hawks use as hunting perches. PW cages trees against beavers near paths for human safety, leaving uncaged trees elsewhere. PW promotes pollination with pollinator gardens and bee boxes and replaces invasive plants with competitive natives. These and other practices contribute to a diverse population, including turtles, bullfrogs, beavers, stocked trout, owls, cormorants, kingfishers, egrets, ospreys, herons, geese, mallards, grebes, wood ducks, green-winged teals and mergansers. Carpenter-Driscoll said Cornell University’s eBird observation database cites 167 confirmed bird species at the Lake.

Patuxent Connection

Just as humans commute between home and work, waterfowl move between Greenbelt Lake and other waterways, including Lake Artemesia and Patuxent Research Refuge’s Cash and Redington Lakes. Photographer Higgins said cormorants nest at Cash Lake and feed at Greenbelt Lake and eagles nest in the Beltsville Agriculture Research Center and feed at Greenbelt Lake. These waterways are part of green spaces extending from the 13,000-acre refuge south to the Anacostia and Potomac Rivers. These and other connections such as regular Greenbelt visitors and volunteers at Patuxent, led to its hosting the exhibit.

How About an Exhibit?

For years the photographers talked about exhibiting someday. In late 2021, Patuxent personnel told Simpson of a February 2023 gap in their gallery schedule, which he accepted for the group. When he asked them if they were interested in exhibiting, they were delighted and booked the dates. It took three months for 22 photographers to prepare an exhibit of one to three photos each.

How Did You Do That?

One element of photography is composition, arranging visual elements within the image. Suzanne Flynn captured a curving line of four mallards that draws the eye to the most colorful duck, surrounded by golden water reflecting autumn leaf colors. Wenzel’s egret photo applied camera settings and composition for unfocused background color to take the viewer’s attention to the focused egret in the center foreground, where backlight glows through the feathers and highlights its sharply detailed beak and eye. The egret’s stance is similar to its umbrella hunting position, whose shade helps it attract fish.

Crissinger’s photo of a deer family shows a photo doesn’t have to be large to tell a story. The mother and two fawns are playing in a shallow stream, the light on the mother’s ears drawing the eye to their feet kicking up splashes of white water in the center, doubled by their reflections in the water. Family fun at the water park!

Want to learn more about these techniques? Simpson will speak at 11 a.m. each Saturday in February at the Patuxent Wildlife Visitor Center. The interactive discussion will address the perspectives, color, lighting and subject matter shown in these photos, as well as exhibition preparation and display formats.

Patience

Please don’t think these photographers show up, take a perfect photo and move on to the next perfect photo. These 47 photos represent many hours and many shots at the scene, and then a careful selection of shots that best illustrate the features or behavior that interested the photographer. It does take patience, but you can also “expect the unexpected,” Crissinger said.

Another echoed him: “One of the things I really like about nature – it’s never the same. I come here every day, the birds change, this year owls, the hawks’ nest, waterfowl come and go, and I never know what I’m gonna see. That’s what makes it fun.”

Greenbelters Hilda and John commented, “It’s amazing that all of this came from Greenbelt Lake. A lot of people don’t know how much wildlife is nearby.” When the photographers are asked “Where did you see that?”, and answer “Greenbelt Lake” or “Lake Artemesia,” they become local wildlife and green space evangelists to their listeners. A photographer said, “Lots of people don’t get a chance to see this. If I share [my photos], maybe more people will appreciate the animals.”

Vlad Tchompalov noted, “When you come here every day, you start to see patterns, you start to appreciate the nature, you see one bird and then others, you see more and more. You start to appreciate the beautiful ecosystem, and how interconnected the different species are. It was natural that we started to photograph it. It let us appreciate it in a whole new light.”

Higgins said, “We’re very lucky to have these parks, an oasis in urban sprawl ... Sometimes I’ll hear someone in a park wishing kids would be quieter, and I tell them, ‘If you like these parks, we’ve gotta get MORE kids to come out and fall in love, otherwise the parks will be gone because they’ll say they’re not important.’”

The exhibit is open through February 28 at the National Wildlife Visitor Center, 10901 Scarlet Tanager Loop, off Powder Mill Road south of Md. 193. The visitor center is open on Tuesdays through Saturdays from 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Mentor for Many

The photographers praise Graeme Simpson for mentoring, encouraging and advocating for them. Gloria Brown said, “Graeme is really one that has given me a lot of insight, how to shoot, what to shoot.” From Mick Morgan: “Graeme here, explaining things to me about what these creatures are; he’s an encyclopedia, he’s done a great job on this.”

Simpson printed, matted and framed over 25 percent of the photos, to boost the confidence of photographers with little to no printing or exhibit experience, who otherwise might not have participated. He said, “I get as much joy framing their photos as they do. There’s something about community there, in helping them display their idea, what they saw in their image, of seeing them walk away happy. It makes me feel good, passing on that knowledge.”

Gary Brown with hawk: "You turn into the trail and there was the hawk."
